THE PROGRAM ORGANISERS

THE ASIAN DEVELOPMENT BANK (ADB)

ADB's vision is an Asia and Pacific region free of poverty. Its mission is to help its developing member countries reduce poverty and improve the quality of life of their people. Despite the region's many successes, it remains home to the majority of the world's poor. ADB is committed to reducing poverty through inclusive economic growth, environmentally sustainable growth, and regional integration.

ADB's Office of the General Counsel has a regional technical assistance project to strengthen environmental law in the Asia-Pacific region by developing environmental law champions through trainer-the-trainers programs ("TTT Programs"). The purpose of the TTT Programs is to expand and improve the teaching of environmental law across the region, thereby leading to more effective development and enforcement of environmental law in the longer term.

IUCN ACADEMY OF ENVIRONMENTAL LAW (IUCNAEL or the "ACADEMY")

In 2003, recognizing the importance of promoting teaching and research in environmental law at the university level, the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN) endorsed the idea of establishing an academy of environmental law. Hence the IUCN Academy of Environmental Law (IUCN Academy) was created at its first Colloquium held in Shanghai, China. Since then, the IUCN Academy has held 14 Annual Colloquia in different parts of the globe, in collaboration with its institutional members.

- 1st Academy Annual Colloquium - Shanghai, China (2003)
- 2nd Academy Annual Colloquium - Nairobi, Kenya (2004)

Acknowledging the IUCN Academy's dedication to environmental law, the Secretariat of the IUCN Academy was established at the University of Ottawa, Ontario, Canada in 2006. As of July 2016, the IUCN Academy Secretariat has moved to the University of Maryland Francis King Carey School of Law in Baltimore and Elizabeth Haub School of Law at Pace University in White Plains, New York, U.S.A.

Since its inception, the IUCN Academy has been able to attract institutional members from different parts of the world who are ready to collaborate at the global level. Its worldwide network is now comprised of close to 200 universities from 59 countries, with many from developing countries, enabling more than 800 environmental law professors and students to interact and to exchange knowledge, experience and resources.

The IUCN Academy operates with a license from the IUCN to use its name. The Academy is governed by a twelve-member Governing Board with representation from ten major regions of the world as well as the Chair of the World Commission on Environmental Law and the Head of the IUCN Environmental Law Programme. This Governing Board provides direction for implementing the Academy's vision and mission.

The IUCN Academy is uniquely positioned in building environmental law education capacity and promoting the conceptual development of environmental law. It encourages teaching and university-level capacity building in environmental law worldwide, with special attention to developing countries and economies in transition. The IUCN Academy facilitates exchanges of teaching and research faculty among universities to enhance the teaching of environmental law, build up the network of scholars who know and collaborate with each other, and enhance comparative study of environmental law.

Train-the-Trainers Project (TTT)

The IUCN Academy is committed to advancing the teaching of environmental law around the globe, particularly in countries where the capacity to do so currently is lacking altogether or is seriously inadequate. It has therefore developed the TTT course as one of its "flagship" projects.

The first course "Advanced Training the Teachers" was conducted in Wuhan, China in early March 2011. This five-day course was developed by a team of law professors from the institutional members of the IUCN Academy, in close partnership with the Research Institute of Environmental Law (RIEL) at Wuhan University.

A second TTT course took place in July 2013 at Chongqing University in China. In both cases, Vermont Law School played a key role in the conception and offering of these courses and received financial support from USAID for the TTT project.

In 2015, with the financial support from the Asian Development (ADB) under ADB's Regional Capacity Development Technical Assistance Strengthening Capacity for Environmental Law in the Asia-Pacific: Developing Environmental Law Champions, the IUCN Academy developed a train-the-trainers (TTT) curriculum, in conjunction with ADB, and delivered two very successful TTT programs in March and June at ADB's headquarters in Manila. The two Manila TTT Programs trained 57 law professors and university lecturers from 14 of ADB's developing member countries. Due to the huge success of these two TTT programs, ADB requested proposal submissions from participants' institutions and received a number of proposals from universities in a number of developing countries in Asia. Five of these proposals were selected for the 2016 In-Country TTT Program, including the Philippines.

In May 2016, the IUCN Academy and ADB conducted the first two in-country TTT programs in Malaysia and Vietnam. A total of 49 law champions were trained in these two programs. Both of these TTT programs were hugely successful and very well received.

In June 2016, the IUCN Academy and ADB invited the Manila TTT participants back to Manila for a Roundtable for Environmental Law Champions which served as a follow up forum for these participants to discuss any progresses they have made in their teaching in environmental law as well as any challenges they face in teaching environmental law in their countries. 28 environmental law champions participated in the Roundtable and it was again a very successful event.

The program aims to keep lawyers updated on development and pressing issues in the national, regional and global arenas requiring legal action and advocacy.

The UC College of Law has gone further in the pursuit of academic excellence and preparing more its law students not only to pass the bar examinations but developing the required skills in the competent practice of law by offering the J.D.
